

Originally from Colorado, Tiani (Hatch) Shoemaker moved to Provo Utah in 1992 to attend Brigham Young University on a full-ride athletic/academic scholarship. She married her high school sweetheart, a quarterback on the BYU football team, and shortly after graduated from BYU with a degree in Fashion Merchandising/Marketing. A few months after graduation they welcomed their first child, Schyler, and her new little family moved to Salt Lake City where her husband worked and she became a full time stay-at-home Mom. Ten years later, Tiani found herself navigating uncharted territory as she became a single mother to three children, including a new born baby, and began her journey of discovering a career that could help sustain her and her young family. After dabbling in various potential options, Tiani discovered she had a passion for real estate and became a licensed agent in 2005. She has enjoyed working in all aspects of real estate including; real estate sales agent, investor, home stager, interior designer and property manager. Her compassion for helping others, particularly other single mother families, along with her background in real state/design and her desire to find opportunities to participate in service projects with her children, led her to create an organization called Little Miracles. Little Miracles is a nonprofit charitable organization that provides opportunities to inspire and connect with others in the community while offering service to single parent families in need. Tiani and her three children, Schyler, Braxton and Nakai, currently live in South Jordan Utah and have been actively involved in this foundation since the very first project in October of 2015. Tiani continues to work as a real estate agent/property manager and is also engaged in many other volunteer programs thru her children's schools, extracurricular activities and their local church.
